Grand Inauguration Mission Beach Decoration Day, May 30th

Opening Date Set For Famous Seaside Capital

FORMAL OPENING OF AMUSEMENT CENTER ON DECORATION DAY

It has been well and wisely claimed that little imagination will be required to visualize the scene of animation and gaiety that will be presented on the oceanside of the Amusement Center at Mission Beach this summer when the promenade is thronged with carefree, pleasure-bent crowds, and the hard clean sandy shore line and the surf is alive with bathers. This picture was in the mind of Claus Spreckels, president and general manager of the Mission Beach company, when in company with Neil Brown, assistant general manager, he made an inspection of the work in progress during the week.

PERMANENCY THE KEYNOTE

"San Diego's claim as the summer and winter capital of the west will become an actuality when the Mission Beach Amusement Center is opened to the public six weeks hence," Mr Spreckels said. "We are building a project which will be one of San Diego's foremost assets, and which will attract pleasure seekers from all parts of the west and goodly numbers from the more distant eastern places. Permanency is the keynote of all construction in the Amusement Center, and along with this policy we are carrying out the idea of artistic beauty and practical utility."

Ocean Theatre

BEST OF PICTURES SECURED FOR THE SPRING BY MANAGER ERICSSON

Besides booking such excellent attractions as Edward Lowe in "Honor Among Men" for tonight (Saturday) and Richard Dix. in "A Man Must Live" for tomorrow night at the Ocean theater an added feature of the Sunday show will be the famous Jack Dempsey series of "Fight and Win" pictures, beginning tomorrow evening, and it's a good word to the wise not to miss any of them.

The mid-week special will be that stupendous sensation the world over entitled "The Last Laugh," with the great European character actor Emil Jannings in the leading role. This production has created a veritable furore on both sides of the Atlantic and is remarkable for the fact that the story is so well unfolded that the customary title lines are omitted throughout. Don't miss it! Good comedy and news are also added on Tuesday and Wednesdays.

Just to give an inkling of some of the topnotch attractions secured by Manager Ericsson for the immediate future it's worth noting that the list includes Jackie Coogan in "The Rag Man," Jane Grey's "Thundering Herd," Lon Chaney in "The Monster," Thomas Meighan and Lila Lee in "Coming Through," Gloria Swanson in "Madame Sans Gene," the James Cruz production of "The Goose Hangs High," and for next Thursday and Friday John Gilbert will be seen in "The Lone Chance." Go early and often.

FUNDS LACKING FOR INCREASE IN PAY

The police and firemen who were voted an increase in salaries at the recent charter amendment election, will only receive a theoretical raise in wages, owing to insufficient funds, announces City Auditor Moody.

It is also stated that the pension and relief fund is in the same fix.

MISSION BEACH GETS FIRST PLACE IN STATE FIESTA PROGRAM

It is announced that the formal opening of Mission Beach on May 30 as one of the principal pleasure places of the Pacific coast has been officially designated by the San Diego Chamber of Commerce as the main San Diego event of this year for an extensive program of California festivals arranged at a conference of chamber of commerce and development club secretaries from the leading cities of the state.

John Fox, Jr., executive secretary of the San Diego chamber, states that the Mission Beach event has been given first place as the choice of festival selections for this city. The object of the state programs is to make 1925 notable as the "festival year" in California.

In harmony with the early history of California, the Spanish idea of dress and decorations will prevail in the festival programs planned.

NEW FLOORING AND ASPHALT SURFACE FOR INLET BRIDGE

According to plans of the city engineer's office, a resolution was sent to the council this week asking that bids be called for providing for new planking and a coating of asphalt surface on the Mission Beach at the inlet to the bay. The plans also arrange for a new guard rail to be bult on the east side of the bridge.

M. F. FENNELL OPENS NEW MEAT MARKET ON VOLTAIRE STREET

Under the captivating title of the "Elite Meat Market," M. F. Fennell announces the opening of an excellent new butcher shop on Voltaire street in connection with Heller's branch store at the corner of Cable street.

Mr. Fennell comes from Phoenix, Arizona, where he established a fine reputation as a worthy and honorable business man. He is not an entire stranger in Ocean Beach, being closely related to a resident of long and esteemed standing, and he will reside here with his family in the future.

Mr. Fennell is a man of most pleasing personality and is an expert in the line of handling meats and poultry. His new "Elite Meat Market" is fully equipped with all modern butchering appliances and accessories for prompt and sanitary service and he asserts that quality will be an outstanding feature, while city prices will prevail with some specials being marked lower each week, as duly listed in his regular advertisement on another page. Mr. Fennell most respectfully solicits the patronage of the residents of the beach and bay districts, and guarantees courteous treatment and satisfactory service in every way.

LIGHTING SYSTEM AND TRAFFIC REGULATIONS AT MISSION BEACH

Reports on possible methods of preventing congestion of automobiles at Mission Beach with the opening of the summer season, will be made by a committee, headed by Harry K. Turner, appointed last Tuesday night at a meeting of the Mission Beach Chamber of Commerce.

Preliminary steps in installation of a street lighting system throughout the resort, also were discussed. Charles Litchfield and Dr. R. V. Jones were appointed by Pres. Charles B. DeLong to confer with City Manager Rhodes regarding the style of light standard to be erected.

"LOMA LORE"

By WINIFRED DAVIDSON
Point Loma, California

"A levee opposes two resistances to the erosive action of running water: firstly, the weight of the material of which it is constructed; secondly, the cohesion existing between the particles of which this material is composed.

"To any one familiar with the site of the work under present consideration, it is evident that the point of attack of the river will be in the crossing of the old river channel; that is to say, between the eastern end of the levee and a point 2,400 feet west therefrom. This portion of the levee has been constructed of clay taken from the Presidio Hill and so thoroughly compacted that it is today almost impossible to drive a stake into it; in addition it is protected by a stone revetment 3 feet thick, resting upon a trench filled with stone. This trench is 5½ feet deep, 4 feet wide at the bottom and 17 feet wide on top, the bottom of the trench being below the subterranean water as it now stands. The remainder of the levee will be protected by a stone revetment 2 feet thick, also resting upon a trench filled with stone. Throwing out of consideration the immense amount of stone in the trench, and considering only the stone in the face wall, there should be added to the weight in the table (19,200 lbs. per linear foot) a resistance due the weight of 15 cubic feet of stone or 1875 lbs. for each foot of the levee. This gives a resistance of 21,975 lbs. per foot.

"It is admitted that when pure sand is used in the construction of the levee, the factor of cohesion has but little value; but no portion of the levee where danger can be reasonably apprehended is built of sand. On the contrary it is built of clay the durability of which when compacted is well known to every resident of this county.

"Among all of the cases cited there is but one (the levees of the Rhine in Holland) where a revetment of masonry is used, and there it is for the purpose of protecting the slopes against action of floating ice. Again, in all of these cases the levees are many miles in length, encircling bends in the rivers and cutting off sloughs and bayous, thus rendering some portion of each one liable to be attacked by the direct action of a normal current.

"With the San Diego river none of these destructive forces are believed to be present. The new channel will be a gentle curve tangential to the general course of the river; it will be parallel to and 100 feet distant from the levee, the convexity of the curve being outward, thus always drawing the current to the farther side and causing it to act in a lateral instead of a normal direction. The levee is short and there are no bends in it which might invite a direct attack, and the river is always free from ice and floating objects of any magnitude.

"Whatever the event may prove to be, this, at least, is certain that the plan for the improvement was, after careful study, decided upon by a Board of Engineers who deemed themselves justified in believing that a levee, stronger by far than those which have for years guided the mighty water of the Mississippi, the Rhine, the Po, and the Adige, might possibly control the waters of the San Diego.

I remain, Mr. Editor, your ob't. servt,

Jno. H. Weeden."

A bit of a bite, to that last sentence, Lieutenant. But we can let that pass at this distance of nearly fifty years, when by walking out of Old Town, standing on the old bridge which temporarily repairs the damagedone in 1916 to a still older bridge, we can look away to the levee which Weeden and his gang of Mexican, Chinese and immigrant laborers raised according to the plans of the government. There have been some remarkable freshets in the San Diego River, freshets which cut Point Loma off from all connection with the main land; in 1811; in 1824-25; in 1855; in 1857; in 1862; and many times since 1876 but never since the last date mentioned has the San Diego attempted to form new deltas across the Marine Base flat. Weeden's work has justified his claim to stability.

Mayor Bacon Boosts Ocean Beach Civic Center

MEMORANDUM OF PLAYGROUND TALK AT OCEAN BEACH, FEBRUARY 16, 1925

By MAYOR JOHN L. BACON

"Most of you believe or pretend to believé in the growth of Ocean Beach, but what are you doing to show this belief? If you really believe that Ocean Beach is going to grow, your belief should be shown by providing in some way for that growth.

"You are considering tonight a playground, a community center with a library, place of assemblage for the entire community, tennis courts and playgrounds for the young people. Property is cheap now and comparatively un-developed, but tomorrow this condition may be changed. If real development is expected we must be table to lok ahead and visualize what this development is going to bring and then act today in making rational provision for this future development.

"The time to buy property for playgrounds is when there are plenty of vacant lots and not to wait until everything is built up and no vacant property is available.

"No one questions the advisability of playgrounds and places where all of the neighbors can get together for community meetings. The Schools, Playgrounds, Libraries and Community Centers all belong together and you will have just such an arrangement as this under the proposed scheme for Ocean Beach.

"If the land were to be purchased that would be required for this playground the assessment to be levied against the property in Ocean Beach would be so slight as to be hardly noticed. You could tie up the family Ford for a week and the money saved would probably pay for the family's share of the playground cost.

"There are plenty of vacant lots now that could be used for playground purposes. You say you believe in the future growth of Ocean Beach If this is the case, these vacant lots are going to disappear.

"If you really believe that Ocean Beach is going to grow you should show this belief by taking steps now to make that growth possible."

MR. H. J. DEVEREAUX ANSWERS SECRETARY KENNEDY ON VITAL SUBJECTS

Mr. Kirk Smith,
Editor of "The Beach News:"

I was delighted to get Mr. Kennedy's answer. I had supposed the C. of C. was dead. Am glad to learn it is able to sit up and take nourishment.

Mr. K.'s figures are as convincing to me as those used by an oil magnate when making out his income tax return. They don't mean anything a-tall.

His argument is bum. He assumes from the start that he is right and I am wrong. I may be, but it isn't a certainty. How does he know I am trying to block a public improvement? I know of a playground in a northern city which depreciated the surrounding property 50 per cent. A matron in another city said that these playgrounds were breeders of immorality. Boys and girls had to be watched constantly.

Now, with reference to gouging out of the heart of O. B. t-w-o s-q-u-a-r-e b-l-o-c-k-s, and closing Santa Monica Ave., one of the best streets in O. B., Mr. K. doesn't say a word.

Will the closing of one of the main arteries in town benefit O. B.? I don't think so. Other cities are opening up new streets, not CLOSING them.

Do you believe it fair to residents of Santa Monica Ave., and intersecting streets to bottle them up in a blind alley? Do you know that the paving of S. M. Ave. will be stopped? And do you know that residents of this street fought for three years to get this paving?

Any city planner will state that breaking the continuity of a street causes depreciation of values. An intelligent man or woman will not locate or stay on a street to which he has no DIRECT access.

We want this fine section of the town filled up with homes. And how about the people living on the proposed site, whose land will be condemned and houses razed? Can anyone make them like it?

Most of them will build again—but not in O. B. I do not know where Mr. K. lives, but would wager he does not live in vicinity of the proposed site.

Children are all right—the little dears—so are bears and lions, but who wishes to live in close proximity to their roars? I lived next to a playground—just once—never again! This playground fad may be the cat's whiskers, but we should not trample upon the rights of others to attain this end.

I own property close by and don't want it's value cut in two. If the women who are for this could realize that the HOME is a grand community house and playground combined, everything would be Jake.

And, by the way, while the C. of C. was howling for a civic center the public toilets were out of commssion, broken, running over and in such a filthy condition they could not be used. Did any one do anything about it? Why, yes, you all did—N-O-T. However, they are fixed; new toilets put in and a reinforced concrete wall put in the rear. I mention this, because it was by my efforts that this was done. While you were attending to a civic center, I was looking after your physic center because we needed it.

I am for anything we need. Yours truly,

H. J. DEVEREAUX.

THE TRUMP WAS NEVER TURNED

By BARNES MAC GREGGOR

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

THE ferryboat, Rappahannock, had an experience in the winter of 1873 that will never be forgotten by any of her passengers.

During one of her regular trips between New York and Brooklyn this boat suddenly quit her respectable though somewhat monotonous career, and became a common tramp, without port or destination.

The day awoke in fog such as the oldest inhabitant had never seen. The East river was blocked with ice and soon became a shrieking bedlam of groping and bewildering craft, whose pilots could scarcely see their hands before their faces.

At half-past nine the Rappahannock left Brooklyn, well laden with passengers, and started on her customary trip almost directly across the river—a very short and unusually easy voyage. Before even reaching the middle of the stream, however, the ice and fog had thrown her completely out of her course. Back and forth, up and down stream, the pilot vainly groped, amid the shrieking whistles, ringing of fog bells, and loud crash of ice boulders, until, in the confused clangor, he had entirely lost his bearings.

When, after long and perilous battling with ice jams and many hairbreadth escapes from collisions, he suddenly sighted the landing place on the New York side, he found it occupied by a sister boat, which had been driven there to avoid destruction. He backed out, only to be lost again, and for three hours this boat, now become a mere tramp, wandered aimlessly up and down the East river with its load of excited passengers, whose emotions ranged anywhere between the rage and impatience of the belated Wall street speculator, to whom the delay might mean a loss of fifty thousand dollars, to the hysteria of a nervous little woman who had left her baby alone at home and who begged the other helpless passengers for the love of heaven to help her set her feet once more on land.

Between these two extremes of impatience and excitement was a small proportion of passengers who remained calm, even endeavoring to while away the time by exchanging pleasantries and making wagers as to the time of their deliverance. Among these was a group of men in the cabin who, after having read and re-read the morning papers, were casting about for some other method of killing time. One suggested a game of cards.

"Cards!" laughed one of his companions in misery. "Who'd carry cards on a ferry-boat? Who, outside of a lunatic asylum, would start on a ten minutes' voyage provided with games to pass away the time?"

"Here is a euchre deck which is at your service."

The speaker, evidently a globe-trotter, drew from under the bench a traveling bag, so much worn and embellished by tags, labels and hieroglyphics that it resembled some old veteran just returned from the wars and still covered with surgeons' plasters. From this he produced a pack of cards and tendered it to the man who had suggested a game.

"Certainly, if you will join us; but what shall we do for a table?"

"Here is a camp stool," said the man of the world. And in a moment four men were sitting around it, cutting for deal, which chanced to fall to the stranger.

The cards were distributed rapidly and the dealer was about to turn the trump when a loud shriek pierced the air and a woman opposite suddenly sank fainting to the floor.

The tension among the passengers had become so great that a panic seemed imminent.

"Don't be alarmed, gentlemen; it is nothing serious," said the dealer calmly. "The lady simply caught sight of her own frightened face in the mirror and the shock caused her to faint. It reminds me of a thrilling experience an American traveler had while bumping through Syria. But, pardon me, the game!"

Once more he made a movement to turn the trump, when one of the party exclaimed:

"There can't be a better time or place than this for telling a thrilling experience."

"Yes," said another; "do give us some other kind of bumping than we are having here. Let's have the story before we begin the game."

The stranger leaned back, passed his cigar case and, having lighted a weed himself, began:

"It is an unwritten law among the wild Bedouins east of the Red sea that if an infidel traveler is attended on his journey by one of the faithful he is safe from the attacks of Mohammedan robbers. As long as the 'Frank,' as all foreigners are called, is under the protection of the Star and Crescent, the rascal's hand is stayed, and as they meet, the villain, who would otherwise show no quarter, salutes with the grave suavity of a courtier. But let that same traveler become separated from the Arab guard that he has bribed to give him safe conduct through his own bandit-infested country, and he becomes legitimate prey. He will be plundered and perhaps killed, or, worse, if the robber thinks that cruelty will extort any secrets of hidden spoil, tortured or held for ransom, with each day's delay losing a few fingers, which are forwarded to the captive's friends to signify that the rascals mean business.

"The party in which this American was traveling had been entering Syria from the south, and were progressed some twelve days from the sacred base of old Sinai. At a place called Bir-es-Sheba, on the regular caravan route to and from Mecca from the north, they heard of some interesting archeological treasures just unearthed some two days' journey to the east, and, having made the detour, the party snugly encamped by the side of a beautiful stream under the shadow of the Tubal chain of mountains.

"The treasures were vastly exaggerated, as is the custom with everything oriental, and they soon determined to turn back to the caravan route and 'bump' on into Syria—'bumping' being the familiar term for camel riding, and a very expressive word at that. But on the afternoon of the first resting day some one suggested a jaunt to a famous old well, where it was said were some very ancient tumuli. But, knowing the Bedouins to be conscientious liars, and sick of this unrewarded chase for phantom treasures, the American begged to be left behind in charge of two tents, which were pitched side by side on the bank of the stream.

"This was at last agreed upon, the whole party except himself going off on their three days' trip, leaving their comrade stretched at full length on a rug, his narghill, or water pipe, lighted for company.

"This oriental atmosphere, gentlemen, is a powerful drug. Do what you will to fight against it, its subtle charm holds you captive. The man succumbed to its influence and went fast asleep.

"Out of this sweet, trancelike repose he suddenly bounded into the horrible consciousness of a torturing pain in one of his hands, as though some wild beast was crunching the bones. But, as he writhed to his knees to grapple with the foe, he saw instead three swarthy, evil-faced Bedouins bending over him with ghoulish glee. One had just cut off, with a hideous dirk knife, the first three fingers of his left hand. In an instant it flashed upon him that these were to be sent to his friends with a demand for ransom. He was correct in this supposition, for no sooner had the bleeding hand been rudely bandaged than two of his captors set out upon this mission, leaving him in care of the third, who was heavily armed.

"No one knew better than the prisoner how impossible such a ransom would be. His fellow travelers had brought as little money into Syria as would meet their actual necessities while there. He therefore began to cast desperately about in his mind for a loophole of escape before the fellows should return with these unsatisfactory tidings, which would result, no doubt, in further mutilations.

"As his gaze swept the tent for something suggesting a plan for deliverance, he saw it had been gutted of everything except two articles—his light silk coat, which hung upon the partition between the two tents, and the tourist's shaving mirror, which it concealed. The coat had been overlooked because it was as grimy as the tent wall itself.

"In moments like this one grasps at straws. As it is said a drowning person reviews his past experiences in a brief moment, so this man, facing desperate odds, came to a desperate suggestion.

"He called loudly on a supposed protector in the adjoining tent to come to the 'window' and prove to his captor that he was under protection of a Moslem. As he spoke he slowly drew the coat from before the mirror in front of which the sheik was standing.

"No words can express the unutterable consternation pictured upon that blazing face, livid with fright and wonder, as for the first time it saw its own awful reflection, not knowing it was its own. One instant he stood stock-still, fascinated, horrified, overwhelmed; then collapsed, just as that lady did but a moment ago, and the American quickly possessed himself of his captor's arms and was master of the situation.

"And now, gentlemen," concluded the story-teller, "we will have our game."

As he spoke he again reached forward to turn the trump. There was a quickly drawn breath of horror from those who observed him, for the first three fingers of his left hand were missing.

Before he could turn the card, a savage lurch of the boat, accompanied by the creaking of timbers, announced the arrival of the Rappahannock at her New York slip—and the trump was never turned.

Examination Anti-Fat

"Midwinter examinations are approaching," said a school teacher, "and my class of 40 little girls will lose about 125 pounds in weight.

"If I wanted to put a really efficacious anti-fat on the market I'd make the case of it examination extract. There's nothing like an examination for taking the flesh off the examinee.

"Remember your own examinations. You had no appetite while they were on; you took no exercise; you studied till the small hours; you slept badly. In the end you were a pale, thin ghost of yourself. Examination anti-fat had got in its work.

"Examinations are a good thing, I suppose, but what a lot of young, healthy, vigorous flesh they melt away."

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

WORDS OF CHEER

IF YOU cannot give frequent, encouraging words of cheer to your home-mates and to those with whom you come in contact during your working hours, it would be better to bridle your tongue and seal your lips.

A rough word roughly spoken produces nothing but evil and drives many a sensitive soul to despair. It arouses animosity and hate, quite the opposite of a kindly word which awakens slumbering emotions and kindles a beneficent flame of love.

It may at times, especially when you are not in a pleasant humor, cost a great effort to launch the cheerful word, but if you will brush aside your own turbulent feelings, and send forth the cheer and sunshine of which you are capable of doing, you, too, to your amazement, will participate in their delicious sweets and enjoy the thrill of an unanticipated pleasure.

From the first moment when you begin to practice the scattering of cheering words, the whole atmosphere around you changes.

The world somehow seems drawn closer to heaven, and everything and everybody about you appears brighter and happier.

In reality, there is no change except in yourself. You have sown happiness and are reaping happiness.

You have flung broadcast the sanctified blessings and they are returning to you from every point of the compass, filling your soul with a joy unspeakable.

It is you who are nearer heaven, participating in its delights without knowing it, growing more lovable as the years speed by, dim your eye and whiten your hair.

Old friends turn to you in their sorrow for comfort.

The boys and girls go out of their way to meet and greet you.

Even the derelicts have in some manner heard your praises sung and respect you.

Their bleary eyes brighten and their tough old hearts soften when your name is spoken, in spite of their general belief that they are invulnerable to the gentle touches of kindness.

The greatest workers for the uplifting of humanity are the little words of cheer, which, when fitly spoken, often change beasts to men, spur them to loftier endeavor and turn their terrible night into a glorious day.

Your Last Name

IS IT GORMAN?

GORMAN seems to have first been used as a surname in Ireland, but the first name from which it was derived was Anglo-Saxon and was used throughout the British isles in early days. This was the name Gormund. Mund in these old first names had the significance of protection and the first syllable "gor" may have come from a word meaning war. The name Gormund then would mean war-protection. Eventually the first name came to be Gorman and this was adopted in Ireland as a last name, with O'Gorman, which meant simply son of Gormund.

The Gormans and O'Gormans in this country all seem to have come from Ireland. Both families have contributed members to congress. There is Senator James K. O'Gorman and there was a Senator Arthur Pue Gorman of Maryland and a Representative James Gorman from Indiana.

Senator Arthur Pue Gorman was born in Maryland in 1839. The son of Peter and grandson of John Gorman, who came to this country from Ireland about 1800, settling in Harrisburg, Pa. From that state they went to Maryland and there the family settled.

James Sedgwick, a grandson of Edward Gorman of county Down, Ireland, was representative from Indiana.

Muir—There are two suggested sources for this name. It is certainly sometimes derived from the word muir, which is a north of England and Scotch form for moor. The other suggestion is that it came from the medieval muur, the man who kept the mews—the place where the hawks were kept while moulting. There was such a person attached to every feudal castle while hawking was in fashion and it would be but natural if some of these men derived their surname from their occupation.

MA IN WINTER

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I GUESS I love the things of old
As well as Father does,
But I ain't crazy for the cold
Like he is—dear me suz!
Of course in winter days, my dears,
A lot of fun we had—
But when you git along in years
A coal-stove ain't so bad.

I recollect occasions when
We traveled in a sleigh—
And I was nearly frozen then,
I recollect today.
Of course it's very nice to come
Where woods are white and green,
But winter's just as purty from
Inside a limousine.

Perhaps to drive for twenty mile
Half froze was lots of fun,
But Father ruther makes me smile—
Why, now he hates to run
Around the corner to a show! . . .
But, drive or dance or what,
A movie for amusement, though
Is handier a lot.

And when he talks about the way
Those smarties used to wash
Our faces in the snow—well, say,
I want to fight, by gosh!
However funny it may seem
To Father now, perhaps
I recollect we had no cream
Them days to cure the chaps.

They say that it is "distance lends
Enchantment to the view";
The flight of time as well, my friends,
Makes things look good to you.
So Father of the days of old
To talk will never tire,
When safe and snug from wind and cold,
Beside a dandy fire.

Tigress Ready to Fight Against Odds for Cubs

According to an authority on big game, a tigress is an excellent mother. He says:

I once saw a tigress with two small cubs, about the size of fox hounds, come out of some heavy bush cover, which was being beaten by three or four elephants. The two cubs trotted on ahead, and in order to cover their retreat, the tigress twice charged the line of elephants, roaring loudly.

The cubs would probably have died if I had shot the mother, so I let her go. I thought she deserved this for her bravery.

There were not many tigers about in this particular neighborhood, but strictly speaking it was probably most improper to spare her life, as game was scarce in that locality and this tigress would therefore have probably educated her cubs in the art of cattle killing. A tigress with growing cubs is far more destructive than a tiger or tigress alone, or as a pair.

The tiger cub at birth is very small—in fact, not much bigger than a large rat. Three or four cubs is the usual number, but as a rule only two of a litter grow up. I have once seen four almost full-grown cubs and the tigress all together. The cubs stay with the mother until they are nearly full grown. I have shot them in company with their mother when the male cubs measured eight feet four inches in length, and the females about seven feet six inches. The average length of a full-grown male tiger is about nine feet six inches and of the female, about one foot less. A tiger over ten feet is an exceptionally large one. Ten feet four inches was the length of the biggest I ever shot, and the largest tigress I ever saw was nine feet two inches.

Ordinarily a tiger will kill only sufficient animals for his own needs, and, assuming that his kills are not removed by the natives or devoured by vultures, two kills weekly are quite enough for him. A big male tiger is quite a noble-looking animal.

Skunks and Their Habits

W. Kenneth Cuyler, of the zoology department of the University of Texas, having completely lost his sense of smell, has taken advantage of this unusual condition and hunted and studied skunks for many years. He finds they are easily tamed and make fine mousers. Besides mice, they eat all sorts of things, from roots, berries and insects to birds and eggs, and sometimes rival the possum in their ability to rob the chicken roost. The musk which efficiently defends the skunk from most people is manufactured by two egg-shaped glands with contractile walls which can force out jets in any direction, even directly over the head of the skunk. These jets break up into a fine spray and can reach an object as distant as 20 feet. Mr. Cuyler says skunks are usually loath to waste their musk and therefore do not discharge it promiscuously, but only when cornered and irritated. For removing skunk odor, Mr. Cuyler suggests washing in gasoline or ammonia water, or in water containing a few drops of carbolic acid and oil of wintergreen. A much more effective method, which he regularly uses, is to hold face and hands or clothing for a few minutes in the thick, heavy smoke produced by placing green juniper branches on a good fire.

One of War's Martyrs

Freed from living death, Trooper T. W. Rolfe, known the world over as "The Man in the Bath," has died at Randwick Military hospital, Sydney, Australia. Rolfe was literally flayed alive by German poison gas. His was a case unique in medical history, for he was condemned to pass the rest of his days at Randwick in a bath of tepid water, constantly circulating to keep off surface poisons. "Well, anyway, a bloke can't get much worse," was his smiling comment to the visitors he loved to see. Rolfe became a world figure of sympathy through the publicity his case received, and he had correspondents in Alaska, North China, North and South Africa, Scotland, and various parts of the United States.

Sues an Entire Village

Count Friedrich Szechenyi, a Hungarian aristocrat, is bringing legal action against the entire village of Peterhida in southwestern Hungary. Szechenyi leased a piece of land to the villagers for a rental of one-quarter of a carload of grain a year. The village neglected to pay and the count is bringing suit. He has had the legal forms run off on a duplicating machine and will serve each villager. The case will be heard in Nagyatad, the nearest county seat, and the entire population of Peterhida will have to appear.

Modern Setting

An Emporia school teacher was attempting to familiarize her pupils with the picture of Mona Lisa, by weaving about it a romantic story.

"Do you see the strange background of the picture, children?" she said. "Now where do you suppose Mona Lisa was sitting to have that strange view at her back?"

A youngster in the back row was puzzled only for a moment. "I'll bet she was drying her hair on the sleeping porch, out in the country," he volunteered.—Emporia Gazette.

Build your body back to Health

TANLAC is a great natural builder. It revitalizes the blood, stimulates the digestive organs, rejuvenates the liver and peps you up all over.

From the four corners of the earth we gather the roots, barks and herbs that go into Tanlac. We compound them after the famous Tanlac formula that has brought health to millions.

Our files are crammed with testimonials from men and women in every walk of life, who state gratefully that Tanlac has brought them back to vigorous strength.

If you suffer from indigestion, loss of appetite, can't sleep or rest; if rheumatism is making life a torture; if your liver is out of sorts and your body has run down to skin and bones, get a bottle of Tanlac at your druggist's and start taking it right away.

You'll be amazed to note the improvement that comes at once. For the first time in months you'll feel like eating some good solid food. You'll wake up in the morning rested and refreshed, ready for a good day's work. First thing you know you'll have some color in your cheeks and the sparkle of health back in your eyes.

Don't put off taking Tanlac. Begin now if you want to build your body back to health and vigor.

Baptist Minister Praises TANLAC

"I had suffered from stomach trouble and nerve troubles for over 30 years until I could hardly summon the strength necessary to prepare my sermons. Six weeks after taking Tanlac I had a brand new outlook on life. I had a fine appetite, steady nerves and a brand new digestive system. Tanlac has never failed me."

ECONOMICAL DISHES

A GOOD soup is often all the dish one needs for a substantial meal. Serve with bread to supply the carbohydrates and butter the bread if the soup is not too rich.

Bean Soup.

Take one pound of dried beans, soak over night and drain off the water in the morning, after bringing to the boiling point; repeat the draining twice, then cook at a simmering point for five hours, or longer, until the beans are soft enough to put through a colander. After the draining add one-half pound of salt pork and let it cook with the beans five hours. The pork should be so well-cooked that it will pass through the colander, if so desired.

Fried Tripe.

For those who enjoy tripe:

Use honeycomb tripe, wash well and put into a large kettle of cold water, add a teaspoonful of salt and a pinch of soda, bring quickly to the boiling point, then put back on the stove and simmer slowly for four hours. At this time remove the tripe, drain it, and after dipping in a fritter batter, fry until brown in butter.

Sardine Salad.

Skin and bone a dozen sardines, add a cupful of mashed hard-cooked egg yolks, two tablespoonfuls each of chopped olives and celery, a pinch of dry mustard and lemon juice to moisten. Mix and shape into balls, roll in boiled rice. Arrange around a mound of stuffed olives and serve garnished with roses of mayonnaise.

Salt codfish, soaked and shredded, added at the last, with a quart of milk, omitting the tomatoes, the parsley and lemon, makes a most tasty chowder. Add half a dozen milk crackers soaked in hot milk to the stew, just before serving.

ULCERS

AN ULCER is simply a sore upon the skin or mucous membrane, in other words, a breaking down of the cells, frequently with only slight tendency to get well.

In the latter respect ulcers differ from healthy wounds which begin to get well almost as soon as they are formed or made.

Ulcers may be caused by injury, by burns, and by poor nutrition of the tissues where they occur.

They may be accompanied with sloughing or destruction of the tissue, and perhaps by reabsorption of dead and poisonous material.

They are often attended with hemorrhage and with great weakness in consequence of the prolonged discharge which comes from them, and which means waste of tissue.

This is particularly the case with ulcers which attend such diseases as syphilis and tuberculosis.

Ulcers which accompany these diseases are often incurable unless means are found to cure the diseases which caused them. The treatment of ulcers should be constitutional and consist in building up the general condition; and also local, which is directed to the sore.

The first will include all necessary hygienic measures, comfortable and well ventilated housing, sleep, exercise in the open air, good food, including an abundance of milk, and perhaps such tonics as cod-liver oil, quinine, strychnine and iron.

Local treatment includes cleanliness and frequent dressing of the ulcer, and the application of astringent and stimulating substances, especially such minerals as lead, copper, zinc, mercury and silver.

In ulcer of the stomach, a strict diet is almost imperative—that is, the stomach must be given just as little work as possible.

BOOK NOTES

By Winifred Davidson

"The Little French Girl," by Anne Douglas Sedgwick, continues to head the list of popular books; and the judgment of the majority seems in this case, at least, the finest and fairest. A story of flawless construction, written in a style that is restrained yet intense, fresh and yet sure; an international plot that is understandable everywhere—it would seem to have the elements of the work that lasts. If "Tante" did not place this author among the foremost writers of the day, certainly "The Little French Girl" has done so.

Edna Ferber's "So Big" is still big in the eyes of the reading world. It makes a much better story than picture play, though Colleen Moore does per best dramatic work through this vehicle. Out of the middle west of America are coming some of the greater strengths of its literature. We are waiting now for Miss Ferber's next, for Ruth Suckow's, for Willa Cather's.

"The Plastic Age" caries its mighty message to the parents and guardians of the youth of the hour. This sort of book shocks sensibilities; but if our sensibilities need shocking before we arouse to throw protective measures about the young, then Percy Marks and other writers as fearless must write us more books of "The Plastic Age" type.

Kathleen Norris' latest novel, "Rose of the World" works out the theme of loveless marriage. The scene is San Francisco, the characters are modern and mediocre, but the author has succeeded in writing sympathetically of two or three humdrum situations.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

KEEPING WELL

TYPHOID FEVER

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

TYPHOID fever has been for centuries one of the most dangerous diseases which afflict man. It was long confused with typhus fever and malaria. People still talk occasionally about "typho-malarial fever." As the farmer said about the giraffe, "There ain't no such animal." The two diseases are entirely distinct.

Typhoid fever is caused by a little germ or plant, the typhoid bacillus.

Every typhoid germ comes from the discharges from the kidneys or bowels of someone who has had typhoid. The germs can originate in no other way. So typhoid fever is very appropriately called a "filth" disease.

How do the germs enter the body?

In dirty milk or dirty water or through food contaminated by flies or by dirty hands.

The germs always get into the body through the mouth. After being swallowed, they pass through the stomach into the small intestine where they grow just as plants grow in a hothouse.

The germs in growing produce a poison or toxin, which causes fever, delirium and, in severe cases, death.

Man is the only animal susceptible to this disease.

We know all about typhoid fever. It is entirely preventable.

Every case of typhoid fever is due to someone's ignorance or carelessness. One health authority has said "For every case of typhoid someone should be hanged."

How can we prevent it?

By using only pure water. Drink no water from surface wells where seepage or drainage from outhouses or cesspools is possible.

Practically all our large cities now supply pure water so typhoid fever, today, is largely a rural disease.

If you are not sure your water is pure, boil it for twenty minutes and then cool it.

By using pure milk. Protect the milk from dirty water. Sterilize all cans or buckets by steaming or boiling.

If in doubt, pasteurize the milk by heating it for twenty minutes to 145 degrees F.

By protecting food of all kinds from flies, which carry the typhoid germs on their feet. This was proved at Camp Chickamauga during the Spanish-American war.

By protecting food from contamination by dirty hands. Wash your hands before eating. See that all those who handle your food have clean hands.

If everything which goes into your mouth is clean, you will never have typhoid fever.

IRISH

By Winifred Davidson

When I was born a wicked fay, for daft ends of his own,
Fetched this red land a changeling that he stole from blue Athlone.
Else why should laughter on my lips be crony to a tear?
Else why should my heart quake with joy when Irish words I hear?

There's Irish sorrow in my blood—I had an Irish nurse!
I know the exile's old lament; I know the renter's curse.
Though ne'er I saw an Irish child barefooted in the rain,
If I met up with one, I'd say, "There comes meself again!"

These eyes have never seen the skies that smile o'er Bantry Bay,
These ears have never heard the roar of surf along Galway,
These nostrils never knew the smell of Sligo's fresh-cut sods,
But I could sup with my heart's kin from Glengad Head to Cods.

For well I know an Irish heart is lifting in my breast,
Though I saw day far from moist Eire here in the arid West.
There's Irish music haunting me—wild lilting strains unsung;
There's Irish in my dancing heels, brogue Irish on my tongue.

Power Amplifiers; Use of C Battery

Facts About Design and Construction Outlined in This Circuit.

The fundamental idea involved in the design and construction of a power amplifier is briefly outlined in the circuit shown in the diagram. First, a low ratio audio frequency transformer is necessary to prevent distortion and unbalance in the input side of the vacuum tube. The resistance from 25,000 to 100,000 ohms directly shunts the secondary of the audio frequency transformer and is a positive means for controlling the volume with its resultant distortion. The commercial types of variable resistance are admirably suited for this use.

In a unit of this kind a power amplifier tube works better than the ordinary type of vacuum tube—the UV-201A. The standard five-watt or any of the better power amplifier tubes are fine for this purpose. Power amplifier tubes require a higher plate voltage tha nthe UV-201A and in most circuits the addition of a C battery inserted in the lower lead of the secondary of the transformer returning to the negative side of the filament supply will often clarify and stabilize the circuit quite noticeably. The negative side of the C battery should connect to the secondary of the transformer and the positive terminal of the C battery should connect to the negative side of the filament supply. The value of C battery is governed by the amount of plate voltage used and is outlined in the following table:

Plate Voltage	C Battery Voltage
40	0.5 to 1.0
60	1.0 to 3.0
80	3.0 to 4.5
100	4.5 to 6.0
120	6.0 to 9.0
150	9.0 to 12.0

The use of C battery in any audio-frequency amplifier circuit will materially reduce the current drain on the B batteries, thereby increasing the number of hours of use of these batteries. A C battery will also permit a vacuum tube to function at its most efficient point of operation, amplifying the signal applied to the grid of the tube in a distortionless and also economical manner.—Radio Broadcast.

Pointers on Use and Value of Counterpoise

Many operators of receivers are troubled by broad tuning or by their peculiarity of picking up local disturbances caused by telephone ringers, house-lighting circuits, vacuum cleaners, elevators, etc. Usually these defects may be attributed to faulty ground systems to which many of the above-named apparatus are connected. A counterpoise, very similar to an ordinary flat-top antenna, excepting that it is mounted just above the earth or in the cellar of one's home, may be advantageously employed to eliminate these forms of disturbances. In the diagram several forms of counterpoise are shown with their constructional details and method of use. It is only necessary to remember that to be efficient they should be well insulated from nearby objects. Any type of wire, insulated or bare, may be used. Porcelain cleats may be economically used as insulators. The counterpoise is connected to the radio receiver in place of the ordinary ground connection.—Radio Broadcast.

Forms of Counterpoise With Their Constructional Details.

Selecting Vacuum Tube

Two factors which should be considered in buying a vacuum tube are whether it is to be used as a detector or amplifier and whether it is to be used with a storage battery or dry cells. Some tubes are "soft" and others "hard." A "soft' tube is one containing more gas or air. It works best as a detector and the "hard" tube as an amplifier. The former requires less plate voltage. Amplifier tubes do not regenerate as easily as "soft" detector tubes.

Community Building

Find Improvement Well Worth Time and Money

One good example of a village that was not well planned originally, but now has been transformed into an extremely pleasing place, is Weston, Mass. Weston formerly had a large swamp area in its center. This has been drained, graded, seeded to grass, and planted to pine, fir and chestnut trees. A new town hall and a fire station have been built opposite the entrance to the common. Public buildings now are centrally grouped. Old, unsightly structures have been torn down. The improvements were planned by a landscape architect. It took 25 years to put the plan through, but everyone in Weston now believes the enterprise was worth the time and money it cost.

A village that was started with a good plan and has realized it is Patterson, Calif. This village and colony of irrigated farms, occupying 18,000 acres, were planned in 1910. Roads leading to the village were strategically located and planted with trees and shrubs. The village itself has eight streets radiating from a civic center, where the public buildings are situated. In the last four years the residents of the village have built a public library, a community club house, a concrete swimming pool and a grammar school, and have provided a tourist park.

Ugly Village Called Detriment to Farmer

Beauty is overtaking the drab American village, according to observations of the Department of Agriculture in a current study of village planning and its benefits.

Although nearly 20,000,000 persons live in American villages and a farming population of 30,000,000 largely depends upon them for business, educational and social purposes, the department found they are "usually unattractive and often very ugly," suffering by comparison in this respect with those of other countries. The start that is being made toward improvement and beautification has proved in every case, it was said, a material asset as well as an esthetic one.

Pointing out that, "as the farmer's chief point of contact with outside interests, the village can make a big contribution to the happiness of farm life," the department asserted that an attractive village with good streets and convenient approaches and recreation spots was "an important influence in stabilizing farm life and counteracting the attractions of the cities for the young people of the farm."

Study Plant Needs

The general conditions of a garden cannot supply all plants, or perhaps any plant with those obtaining in the native situation. Right here steps in the skillful, well-posted gardener and supplies by artificial means a compensation for the lack of natural conditions. All who garden should do likewise, or leave gardening to those who will and do. Plants have wonderful powers of adaptation, but the farther we meet them on their journey toward local conditions, the greater will be our success in growing them. A striking case of adaptation is that of the camphor tree, which in its native habitat thrives best with an annual rainfall of 230 inches. Though it thrives here, it does much better in the damp climate of Florida, or even in the gulf frontage of Texas. Study peculiar plant needs and meet them so far as you can.—Los Angeles Times.

Fire Protection

Next to death, nothing is more certain than fire. That is why the portions of the building most vulnerable to fire—the basement ceiling over the heating plant and fuel room, the partitions around the stairwell and the construction around chimney breast—should be plastered on metal lath. Recent underwriters' laboratories test resulted in this construction being accorded a full one-hour rating. This leaves ample time for summoning fire apparatus and the fire can be extinguished with minimum property loss. —New York Herald-Tribune.

Where is the best town in Alabama? It is the town where all the people are working together to accomplish what is best for one and best for all. It is in that kind of community that progressive people want to make their home. If Oneonta isn't that town, let's know the reason why and make it the best town in Alabama.—Oneonta Southern Democrat. Garden Furniture

Outdoor furniture adds greatly to the attractiveness of the garden.

There is something so homelike and unpretentious about wood that this material is the most natural choice for outdoor furnishings.

The greatest danger in the selection of it is the tendency to overcrowding. A few bits of garden furniture, kept well covered with paint of a suitable color, will add charm to any well arranged yard. Each piece must have a logical reason for being placed where 't is.

SMART KNITTED JUMPER FROCKS; LITTLE GIRLS' EASTER TOGS

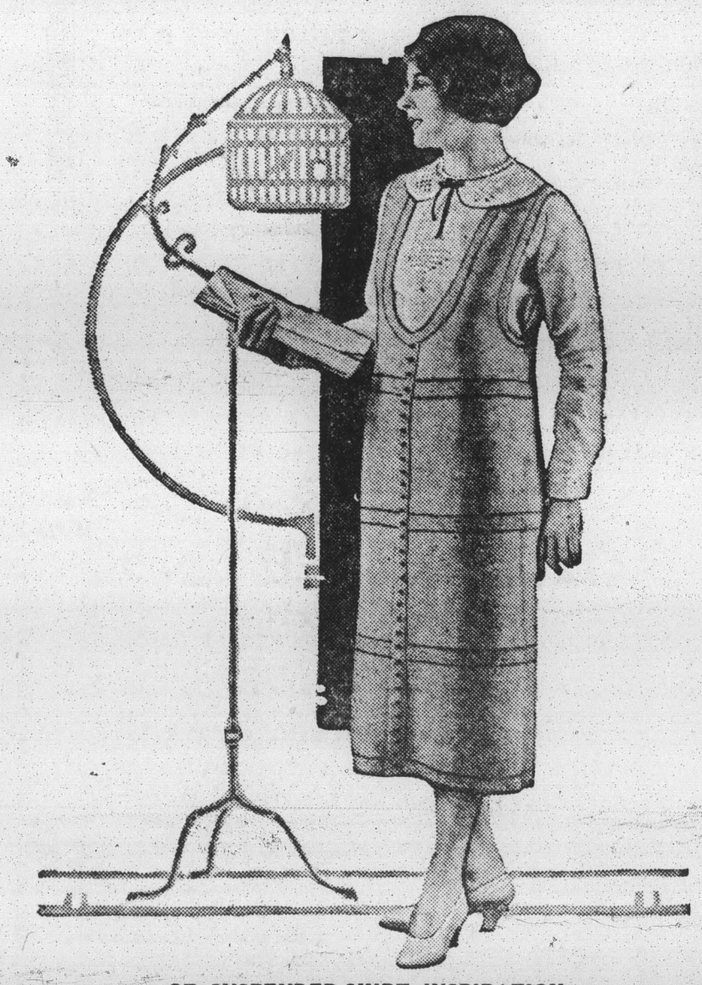
WHEN it comes to "the right thing at the right moment" knitted outerwear is ever ready to answer the call. Just now it is the knitted jumper frock which looks enough like the popular suspender-skirt to be its twin, which appears at the psychological moment. It arrives in its charming knitted way just when we need it most—the "betwixt and between" season when we feel the urge to freshen up our wardrobe with something smart and timely.

Being, as it is, of the suspender-skirt family the importance of the knitted-without-sleeves frock, such as the picture shows, cannot be overestimated. There is nothing like a cool fresh-laundered blouse to drive away that dull "spring fever" feeling which assails most of us about now. No wonder the suspender-skirt is becoming so tremendously popular from coast to coast. The model in the picture tells its own story of its appeal to schoolgirl, outdoor and business woman alike, in that it is designed to be worn with separate waists or blouses. The fact that it is knitted adds to its prestige.

Of course one can change the whole appearance of this costume by substituting a handsome silk plaid or crepe blouse, and in this way dress to occasion. Just now there is a decided movement toward wearing elaborately embroidered peasant blouses of washable voile and they combine handsomely with the knitted suspender-frock.

These knitted suspender-skirtlike dresses admit of many combinations. For instance, suppose the frock be knitted of fine camel's hair. On a cool day why not wear it over a T-neck jumper knitted of rayon which is so silky, with sleeves long and close-fitting? A beige-colored knitted blouse would be striking with a russet or amber-colored knitted sleeveless dress. A clever thing to do also would be at the time of purchasing the knitted suspender-skirt to match it with a tuxedo sweater or knitted coatee and there are such cunning types to be had. Thus one would be outfitted with a smart springtime knitted ensemble or suit complete, which would also serve as an interchangeable costume.

If any there be who think that grownups only are eligible to enter the Easter style parade, let the picture of this very much dressed-up little girl dispel the illusion. Junior apparel fills a very definite place on the fashion program these days; mother and big sister will have to be most wondrously frocked to compete with little daughter in any style contest. Indeed it is not hard to guess as to who will carry the honors when little miss is clad in a frock of suede-finished cloth in an adorable shade of blue—pompadour blue it is called—with embroidery, as the picture shows, traversing the length of the front-side opening; when her roll-top stockings are of pure white silk, her patent-leather slippers glistening in the sunshine; her hat an alpine felt in a deeper blue than her gown.



OF SUSPENDER-SKIRT INSPIRATION

This little girl does not happen to be carrying it on her arm, nor is she wearing it, but no doubt she owns a coat to match this dress of blue, for in childhood's realm the ensemble theme dominates little folks' modes just as it does throughout the fashions of their elders. Adaptations of details which mark the mature mode are amusingly carried out in ensemble costumes for children and this adds a new note of interest to the styling of little daughter's spring and summer wardrobe.

The adult ensemble modes are copied even to a row of fur on the bottom of the bengaline coat, which tops a dress of print or faille, banded and bordered to match the wrap.

Referring again to the model in the picture, the fact that it is such a lovely shade of blue calls to mind that pastel colored flanneis make up charmingly for children and so do the new striped ones. Buttons used in continuous rows serve as an appropriate trimming.

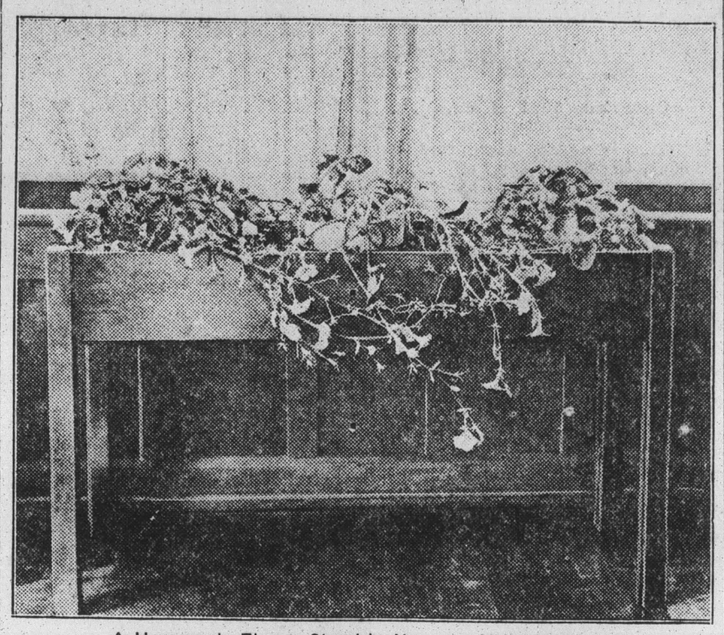
FOR EASTER STYLE PARADE

HOMEMADE FLOWER STAND IS CONVENIENT



A Homemade Flower Stand in Use on a Virginia Farm.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

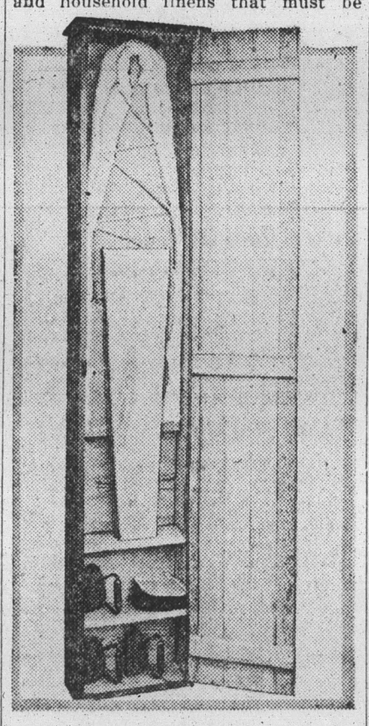
A farm woman living in Albemarle county, Virginia, extended to several other rooms in her house the improvement made in her kitchen under the stimulus of the contest organized by the extension forces of the state agricultural college and the United States Department of Agriculture. Lacking some of the furnishings she wanted, and living too far from shopping centers to buy them, she managed to make a number of pieces herself, out of ordinary lumber and with simple tools. Among these was a very convenient window stand for flowers, long enough to hold several pots of plants, which make the entire side of the room look charming. Any woman who can handle a saw, hammer and plane might attempt a simple flower box like this, made to fit the dimensions she requires. An oblong pan of tin sheeting, soldered at the corners, is necessary in the bottom of the box. The finished stand may be stained to suit the other furnishings.

DIFFERENT WAYS OF REDUCING IRONING

Careful Smoothing and Folding Is Great Help.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If the mother of the family is also the laundress, it is a good rule for her to replace as many of the things that require elaborate ironing with those that can be ironed flat or not ironed at all. The amount of clothing and household linens that must be ironed can really be considerably reduced in this way, the United States Department of Agriculture points out. In hanging out and drying articles that are to be used without ironing, special care must be taken to pull them into shape. Careful folding and smoothing when they are put away will also make them look better, especially if they are kept in piles in the drawer or on the shelf.



A Convenient Arrangement for the Ironing Board Makes Ironing Easier.

Turkish towels of medium weight, not too large or too heavy, can replace ordinary hand towels which need pressing. Certainly tea-towels may be put away unironed. Unironed sheets, sweet with the fresh smell of out-of-doors, are actually preferred by many housekeepers. Spreads of so-called dimity, which is a kind of seersucker, can also be used without ironing. Small plate doilies are easier to launder than large tablecloths, and crocheted doilies, or those made of the oilcloth that comes for the purpose, do not need any ironing.

Not only knitted underwear, but also undergarments and night clothes of crepe, seersucker, or even muslin, can be carefully smoothed and pulled into shape before they are dry and worn without ironing if it is a question of saving the mother's valuable time and strength. It is a waste of time and strength to iron socks and stockings, diapers, or even children's handkerchiefs.

The present-day fad for sweaters, worn instead of blouses, especially by school and college girls, saves considerable laundry work. The sweaters are not ironed at all, and like other garments made of wool, usually catch dirt less quickly than cotton or linen. In cold weather a neat wool jersey fitting at the neck and wrist, or a regular sweater, often solves the mother's problem of keeping a careless boy tidy and clean without a great burden of laundering. Knitted or crocheted garments should be measured before they are laundered, carefully washed without stretching or twisting, pulled or patted into the original shape while wet, and placed on a padded table to dry.

Shirts with plain soft bosoms and soft cuffs have practically superseded those with stiff or plaited bosoms and stiff cuffs, and are undoubtedly easier to iron. Blouses and dresses with simple flat trimmings are more easily ironed than elaborate ones. By using washable silk blouses and dresses for school, college or business, the wearer can look neat with less laundering than with cotton or linen ones. Children's dresses of dark brown, dark blue or sateen, with gay-colored appliqued trimmings, worn with bloomers to match, are much in vogue at the present time. They have the advantage of looking clean and presentable much longer than other wash clothes and are nevertheless easy to launder whenever it is necessary.

POP CORN MAKES AN EXCELLENT CEREAL

Suggested as Good for Sunday Supper at Home.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Though corn meal is now used in other parts of the world, pop corn seems still to be a peculiarly American product. White, fluffy kernels of popped corn have been found among prehistoric Indian remains in South America and also specially shaped earthenware imp'ements with a depression in the center and a long handle, evidently the equivalent of our modern corn poppers. In olden days in this country the grains were sometimes thrown on the hot coals, where they burst and bounded back on the floor for the children to scramble after.

Though pop corn is most often eaten between meals as a sort of food accessory, it has a food value similar to that of the same weight of corn prepared in other ways. It makes an excellent breakfast cereal served with milk or cream, and is so used in many families. The United States Department of Agriculture suggests that a good supper for a Sunday at home is corn popped over the open fire and served hot with melted butter, or with milk and a little salt, and perhaps with apples or other fruit as a finish.

The recipes which follow show how popped corn can be made into wholesome homemade sweets of which children and elders are usually very fond.

Chocolate Pop Corn

2 cupfuls white sugar.
2 bunches chocolate.
1 cupful water.
½ cupful corn syrup.

Cook these ingredients together until the sirup hardens when dropped into cold water. Pour the hot sirup over four quarts of crisp, freshly popped corn and stir well to insure the uniform coating of the kernels.

Sugared Pop Corn.

Make a sirup by boiling together two cupfuls of granulated sugar and one cupful of water. Boil the sirup until it strings from the spoon or hardens when dropped into cold water. Pour the hot sirup over six quarts of freshly popped corn and stir well.

Pop Corn Balls.

1 pint sirup.
1 pint sugar.
2 tablespoonfuls butter.
1 teaspoonful vinegar.

Cook these ingredients together until the sirup hardens when dropped into cold water. Remove to back of stove and add one-half teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one tablespoonful of hot water and then pour the hot sirup over four quarts of freshly popped corn, stirring till each kernel is well coated. The mixture can then be molded into balls or into any desired form.

Maple sirup makes light-colored balls, while darker ones are made with New Orleans molasses.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

HELPFUL BUNNIE BONNIE

Melly was ill. She was feeling very sick and the doctor came and though he was as kind as kind could be, he did give her most horrible medicine to take.

Allie Baa Never Left Melly.

It made Melly feel a little better, but she still felt sick.

Her head ached and she felt quite hot and very tired.

Allie Baa never left Melly. When Melly couldn't play Allie Baa didn't seem to want to play.

She wasn't restless, nor did she show in any way that she wanted to do anything else but stay by Melly's side, and give her what comfort she could.

Not only did Allie Baa behave so quietly, but Allie didn't want to do anything while Melly was ill except stay by her side.

Not long before Melly had been given several pet rabbits. They were darling little rabbits. Their noses wiggled and their whiskers shook as they smiled at Melly.

Melly knew they smiled at her! Some people would not have seen that they were smiling. But Melly loved her rabbits and they loved her, so she knew they smiled at her, just as she smiled at them!

But a sad accident had happened to two of the rabbits. Dogs had put an end to their little lives, and Melly had been very sad.

She cried, and Allie Baa had snuggled up into Melly's arms and had tried to say as best she could:

"Dearest mother, I am so, so sorry."

Allie's comfort and sympathy had helped a great deal. And then the favorite rabbit of all had been rescued in time.

The harm had been done before any of the family knew what was happening. But oh, fortunate indeed had been the fact that they had driven the dogs away before poor little Bunnie Bonnie had been attacked.

How his heart had raced, how he had trembled as he had tried to hide from the dogs.

How happy he was when he was rescued and when all was quiet again.

He and Melly had become greater friends than ever after that. He followed her around, he loved to be held and fondled, he showed his devotion in so many ways. And it was so nice that Allie Baa was not jealous of Bunnie Bonnie, nor was Bunnie Bonnie jealous of Allie.

But now Melly was ill, and poor Bunnie Bonnie was very lonely.

He was so lonely he couldn't eat. He didn't understand why Melly didn't bring him his food. He didn't understand why Melly didn't come down to the end of the garden where were his house and private garden.

"He won't eat," Melly's mother said to the doctor, "and I think Melly would feel better, too, if Bunnie Bonnie were allowed to see her."

Bunnie Bonnie was brought to Melly's bed and with happiness shining in his little pink eyes he nestled down by Melly's side.

Melly Felt Better, Too.

He ate some clover now. He had a good meal of carrot. And Melly felt better, too.

Oh, how quiet and good he was! He seemed to understand that Melly was not very well and that he must help to make her well.

There they were, Melly and Allie Baa and little Bunnie Bonnie, all upon the big bed in the old bedroom.

And the next day when the doctor came he said:

"That little rabbit has helped me a great deal. Melly can sit up today on the back porch in the sunshine."

"Oh, what joy there was that day. You could have seen it in each of their faces had you seen them—Melly and Allie Baa and the little, soft, furry, black and white Bunnie Bonnie!

EFFECTIVE WORK
WATCHWORD OF ACTIVE
NEW ORGANIZATION

According to plans of the leading members of the recently organized Mission Beach Chamber of Commerce the residents and property owners of San Diego's newest seaside community intend to do their full share in promoting the development of that great suburb.

Included in the membership of the new organization are many who are prominent in the business and professional life of the city, and all of whom are enthusiastic property owners at Mission Beach. Justice Charles B. DeLong is president, and Attorney John W. Mott is secretary-treasurer. The directors include Charles Liftchild, chairman of the executive board; Judge Claude L. Chambers, chairman of the improvement board; Harry K. Turner, chairman membership committee; Mrs. Chris Schults, chairman social committee, and Mrs. F. J. Greenfield, chairman publicity committee; Anton Hansen, chairman legislative committe, and J. Bert McLees. Although the Mission Beach chamber of comerce is less than three months old, the membership is approaching 100, and eventually will be several times that number, says Chairman Turner, of the membership committee.

THE FRIENDLINESS OF MODERN BANKING

By WILLIAM E. KNOX
President American Bankers Association

Until a few years ago savings banks were extremely austere institutions. They were founded to do the kindliest thing in the world, that is, to take care of the savings of poor people, but they did it in a most repellent way. They did not extend to their banking business any of the courtesies or any of the amenities of life whatever. They simply took the money, did the depositor the favor of taking it, and gave it back to him when he wanted it. And then they considered their full duty done.

William E. Knox

The tellers and clerks treated the depositors as though they were entirely beneath them. I, myself, heard a depositor, an old Irishwoman, say to a teller who had been snappish with her: "Then you better keep a civil tongue in your head. It is the likes of me that keeps the likes of you in your place." In that brief and caustic and well-deserved comment she had summed up the whole situation in a nutshell.

There was nothing warm, nothing cordial, but as the years went by those who worked at the windows got on friendly and kindly relations with the people coming to the windows. Here and there some man got so close to the people that they began to tell him their personal affairs and ask for his advice, and of late years the banks, too, have been stressing the human element. They have struck a better way of approaching people.

They have taken steps, for instance, to try to get as close as they can to the foreign element. That is one of the great problems in all the large

RUMORS REVIVED
THAT UNION PACIFIC PLANS
SAN DIEGO ENTRANCE

The state harbor board has announced the completion of a survey of the mean high tide line of Mission Bay, and the filing of a map showing the bulkhead of the south shore of the bay. Mayor Bacon is ex-officio member of the board, and the maps were left at his office this week for his signature.

It is stated that this work is in preparation to filling in and the reclamation of a large section of tidelands south and east of the bay. It revives rumors that the Union Pacific railroad plans to build into San Diego and help develop this city as a shipping port.

It also has been reported that right-of-way agents are busy buying up land in the vicinity of Mission bay, and that property owners from there to La Jolla are giving options on land which the railroad is expected to cross.

Mayor Bacon is quoted as saying that while he was on a reecnt trip to Las Vegas, Nev., Union Pacific officials informed him that the line soon would be extended from Los Angeles to San Diego.

The following cadets took part in the program:

PRELIMINARY STEPS
FOR BUILDING OF PIER
AT PACIFIC BEACH

By the adoption of a resolution closing a strip of the waterfront at Pacific Beach, the city council early this week cleared the way for the construction of a pleasure pier at that resort. Ernest Pickering is behind the pier project, and has a permit from the Government to construct the pier into the ocean.

Recently the council, on a petition from residents of Pacific Beach, agreed to narrow the boulevard along the ocean at that beach to provide room for the approach to the proposed pier. Thirty feet of the land will be deeded to the city, for a boustruct the pier into the ocean.

UNDER NATURAL LAWS

Great changes are occurring in the agricultural situation. Gloom and grouch are giving way to renewed hope. We all rejoice that this is happening. It is being brought about through the immutable and inexorable natural laws. It is as difficult to legislate prosperity as to attempt by law to make folks honest. Agriculture in the last analysis operates under about the same basic laws as any other business.—P. B. Doty, Agricultural Commission, American Bankers Association.

ADVERSITY A STIMULANT TO GOOD FARMING

An interesting experience is told by Dean Dodson of a Louisiana farmer who was just about breaking even in growing cotton. One day his wife fell seriously ill and was obliged to go to the hospital. A little later his daughter was also taken to the hospital. Before he was through with this experience he was confronted with a bill for $2,200. What was he to do?

Like a good business man he began to figure how he might increase his income and cut down his expenses. He had a few cows that he kept for raising calves. He started to milk these and sell the product. He had some cull potatoes that were unsalable. He fed these to his cows and some pigs which he was able to buy right. Other waste products were utilized in the same manner. In the garden he had more turnips than he needed for his own use. These he sorted, selling the best and feeding the poor ones. He consulted with his merchants as to what garden crops he might profitably grow for the local market.

He figured that he had some idle land that he might use in growing grain and hay. He enlarged his flock of poultry and took better care of it. He was more careful in the use of his auto and saved a considerable sum that ordinarily went for gasoline. By taking advantage of the increased sources of income and by cutting out unnecessary expenses he was able by the end of the year to pay off his hospital bill, and in the meantime had discovered the secret of sound and successful farming.—Banker-Farmer.

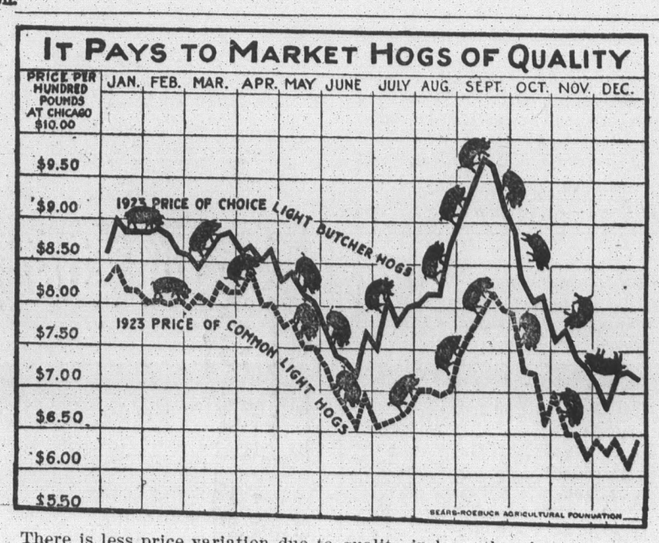
IT PAYS TO MARKET HOGS OF QUALITY



There is less price variation due to quality in hogs than in any other animal in the live stock kingdom. Yet, quality speaks, even on the hog market, with top prices going to the smooth, plump porkers. According to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, during the past year choice fat-backs in the lightweight class on the Chicago market, averaging from 150 to 200 pounds, brought from 37 cents to $1.50 per hundred over common hogs of the same class. At the beginning of the year choice lightweights were selling 37 cents a hundred over the commons. Through February highest prices for lights were 81 cents over the low price. During March, April, May and June the spread narrowed only to widen again through July and August. In October top prices in the lightweight class were hovering around $10.00 while low quotations were two dollars less per hundred.

Butcher and bacon hogs are graded as choice, good and medium in the heavyweights, and choice, good, medium and common in other weights. Formerly there existed a grade known as prime, which possessed the maximum of condition, form and quality. At present it is extremely difficult to get this grade in the desired market weights. Choice hogs have the conformation and quality that are desired in prime hogs, but are not quite so well finished. Good pure bred sires are relatively cheap now and their use would insure higher quality litters next spring.

PAVING ORDERED
FOR SANTA MONICA AVENUE
TO BEGIN FORTHWITH

At the meeting of the city council last Monday, discussion of the closing of Santa Monica Avenue resulted in the announcement by City Manager Rhodes that he had signed the contract for the paving of Santa Monica Avenue from the bridge to DeFoe Street and that it would not be closed, as has been desired by those favoring the purchase of property for a Civic Center in that section.

It has been proposed to vote $20,000 in bonds for the Civic Center, but the Santa Monica avenue residents argued that closing the street would work a great injury to their property. A communication was read from William F. Agan, president of the Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. Annie B. Mulville of the Parent-Teacher association, and Roberta Winans, president of the Women's club of Ocean Beach, requesting that the paving be held up until the results of the election are known. The council "filed" this request.
